

Rally for Good Jobs

Every day, Port of Seattle workers move tons of goods at the seaport and thousands of passengers at the airport.

The work we do at the Port pumps billions into our local economy and makes big profits for our employers. But thousands of Port workers struggle at poverty-level jobs – while Port CEO Tay Yoshitani makes nearly $400,000 a year.

On November 10th, Port of Seattle executives will be honored for their “contributions” to the economy, with a $1,750-a-table awards banquet at the Bell Harbor Conference Center hosted by the Seattle Chamber of Commerce.

Workers weren't invited to the banquet to have our contributions honored. So instead we're holding our own ceremony right outside their banquet hall. Join Port workers, faith leaders, and community members to speak out and say: Every Port job should be a good job!

People's Banquet and Awards Ceremony to Honor Port Workers

Thursday, November 10th

5:30 – 7 p.m.

Outside Bell Harbor Conference Center

2211 Alaskan Way, Pier 66
Seattle, 98121

Working Washington is bringing people together to fight for good jobs and a fair economy. For more info, visit workingWA.org.